Hotel's History

Praya Palazzo is steeped in history, the beginnings of which date back to 1923. At that time, Bangkok had an influx of Italian artists arriving at work under the commission of King Rama V. Famous artists such as Galileo Chini and Carlo Rigoli worked on projects all around the city.

Praya Chollabhumipani - a noble of the Royal Court Custom Department - assigned to design and build the villa, was greatly influenced by these Italian artists. The original building called "Baan Bang Yee Khan" is typical of the Palladio architecture of this period. Located right on the banks of the Chao Phraya River, its position was ideal as an observation point for the owner's customs duty as well as his home.
